In the case of the Baniwa, Wright identifies a pervading "millenarian tradition" in which cosmic history is marked by repeated catastrophes followed by recuperation and the establishment of new worlds. Crucially, these same mythic themes of destruction and regeneration are used by the Baniwa to interpret their own present and historical experience. In this ethnography of Baniwa religion, Robin M. Wright explores the myths of creation and how they have been embodied in religious movements and social action--particularly in a widespread conversion to evangelical Christianity.
